

Free space for the former bankers

Newly redundant Lehman Bros employees have been thrown a lifeline. Serviced office provider Business Environment is offering free office space to any ex-Lehman employee who plans to start up his or her own business following the collapse of the investment bank.

“We know from experience that, following redundancy, many people utilise their skills by starting their own business and we are keen to help,” gushes managing director David Saul.